Colombia: Carlos Lleras Restrepo, the candidate of the governing National Front, is expected to win a comfortable majority in the presidential election on 1 May.

The presidential campaign, which followed the National Front's victory in the congressional elections of 20 March, has been uneventful. Lleras has been devoting considerable effort to aligning congressional support for his future legislative program. Jose Jaramillo, the only other candidate, is backed only by the National Popular Alliance (ANP) of former dictator Gustavo Rojas Pinilla.

Since Lleras' election is virtually assured, voter apathy and the anticlimactic nature of the election will probably bring out less than a third of the registered voters. Such a small vote will give Lleras a weak mandate. The ANP has more at stake, however. Unless Jaramillo can make at least as good a showing as the ANP did in the congressional elections, the ANP's contention that it is "the wave of the future" will lose force.

The armed forces and police will be on alert during the election. There may be problems from student and subversive groups, but the government appears prepared to deal with any disturbances that arise.

NOTES

USSR: Soviet naval forces are actively "showing the flag" in the Mediterranean. A Soviet destroyer, oiler, submarine tender, and two submarines arrived in Oran, Algeria, Monday for a four-day official visit. Similar Soviet naval groups have called at Egyptian ports four times during the past year. These are the first non-Communist countries in the Mediterranean to be visited by Soviet combat ships since the Russians began regular patrols there in 1964.

Dominican Republic: The accidental killing of a Dominican shoeshine boy by a US sentry at the embassy residence yesterday bodes ill for today. The incident provides super-nationalists and Communist elements with an emotional and highly exploitable issue for use in anti-US demonstrations marking the anniversary of the landing of US military forces in the Dominican Republic.
